- 2. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance:

Claims 1-10 are allowable because the prior art alone or in combination does not teach or fairly suggest an apparatus for mitigating electromagnetic energy emanating from an electronic device, comprising a cover member and a retaining plate having a bottom surface that is configured to abut an electronic component, and a bight coupling the fixed end of the retaining plate to the proximal end of the cover member and providing the retaining plate a biasing force away from the cover member, taken in combination with the other claimed features.

Claims 11-14 are allowable because the prior art alone or in combination does not teach or fairly suggest an apparatus for mitigating electromagnetic energy emanating from an electronic device, comprising a first planar member and a second planar member having a bottom surface that is configured to abut an electronic component, and a return bend coupled to the fixed end of the second planar member and the proximal end of the first planar member, and the first planar member, the second planar member, and the return bend are configured to provide a biasing force toward an enclosure of the electronic device, taken in combination with the other claimed features.
